9 Agreed!! People are saying it ruined the vote/plan, but Pence had already put his announcement put before it started.

Did they take down barriers and climb over wall? Yes. They were yelling fight fir Trump, etc and flag waving. That was it, then stuff escalated from there.

The first group of us had barely settled in before they rushed. It was way early and before Alex's crowd arrived. Still, just people waving flags and shouting their (rightful) opinions.

1 I think it was amazing because it sent a message to the elites. There's more of us than them

▼ Elijah Riot is breakout star for live stream footage in 2020. Great debrief with footage from the event.

This documents approach into the capital. Quality useful for frame-by-frame to examine behaviors in play. Were the barricades far too soft? The response is porous. Lazy walking up and tossing barricades aside. There's some jostling but nothing like what we're accustomed to seeing in the 100 nights of riot in Portland and in those areas the police are going soft.

Are the barricades soft breadcrumbs inviting the way in?

In general the right has been blue lives matter so it makes sense that police might casually assume it would be a lazy day. Genuine caught by surprise.

At the same time it's easy to direct a crowd where you want it and our State Department specializes in orchestrated color revolution events doing just that. Orchestrating a semi-organic-ish hijack of a group this large is well within the wheelhouse of our country. We developed and refined those techniques. The violent kabuki theater would entertain a hidden elite. The ideal outcome occurred for those who benefit from such a theater.

Wild show. Are we not entertained? We should ask smart questions. Iterate tactics. Turn a fallen soldier into a holy martyr for fun and festivity airing of grievances.
